

HR Academic

The HR Academic Award is in recognition of HR academics and their professional contribution to the HR body of knowledge through academic research and / or teaching.

Eligibility: Academics with a specific focus on HR either through teaching or research activities.

Criterion	Defined as:	Evidence
Development & Delivery	Development and delivery of HR related programs and/or Research in the HR discipline	Evidence of depth in research/and or teaching/ contribution to the body of HR knowledge and practice. (major HR Subject Areas).
Reputation	The depth of Research and/or teaching by the applicant. How they have contributed to the body of HR knowledge and practice	Evidence of contribution to the Asian Pacific Journal Human Resources. Evidence of contribution to AHRI research and publications, HRM Monthly. (Published papers, awards, conference speaking engagements)
Understanding of operating environ	The applicant has an understanding of the institution/organisation's operating environment, its context and objectives and how their role fits into these.	Evidence of how your role in the institution/organisation contributes to the delivery of the objectives/goals of the institution/organisation. (maximum 500 words)
AHRI's Model of Excellence	The applicant has applied the AHRI Model of Excellence skills, knowledge and behaviours within teaching/research/consulting philosophies.	Provide evidence of how you utilise at least 3 of the AHRI MoE competencies and behaviours in your research and/or teaching practice. (maximum 800 words)
Continuous Professional Development	Demonstrated commitment to continuous professional development	Provide examples of continuous professional development that you have undertaken to maintain your connection with industry. (maximum 300 words)