How HR leaders see business priorities for 2022

While many HR leaders still expect a focus on improving operational excellence in 2022, executing business transformations is a close second, up significantly from a year before.

Pressure is mounting to make progress on DEI

CEO

Nearly 2,000 CEOs have signed the CEO Action for Diversity & Inclusion pledge.

Employees

76% of employees and job seekers say a diverse workforce is important when evaluating companies and job offers, and 37% wouldn't apply to a company that had negative satisfaction ratings among people of color.

Customers

Twitter saw 85% more mentions of inclusive talent processes in 2020 compared to 2016.

Building Critical Skills and Competencies for the Organization

A top priority for 59% of HR leaders

Common challenge

40% of HR leaders say they can't build skill development solutions fast enough to meet evolving skill needs.

It's tough to predict future skill needs

HR leaders are under pressure — intensified by the economic and humanitarian crises triggered by the COVID-19 pandemic — to ensure their workforce has the skills it needs when it needs them. In an effort to get ahead, many HR leaders try to predict the skills their employees will need to ensure organizational success in the future. Without a crystal ball, however, this predictive approach to skills management often results in organizations investing in the wrong skills.

Nearly one in three skills needed for a job in 2018 will not be needed by 2022.

Structure talent management around skills, not roles

Skills-based organizations structure their talent strategies around skills, not just roles, resulting in a more adaptable workforce.

Target a positive change experience

HR's ability to influence day-to-day changes and create trust and team cohesion share a common factor — a positive employee change experience. To create a positive change experience, HR leaders need to identify "moments of truth" the organization must get right, monitor the impact of day-to-day and higher-level change and empower teams to shape their own change experiences.

Current and Future Leadership Bench

A top priority for 45% of HR leaders

Common challenge

24% of HR leaders believe they do not effectively develop midlevel leaders.

Advancing the right talent

Only 44% of employees say they trust their organization's leaders and managers to navigate a crisis well. Confidence and trust in leadership is also undermined by the lack of diversity.

Gartner TalentNeuron™ data illustrates the lack of diversity among the leadership of U.S. companies, showing that only 10% of senior-level corporate positions are held by a woman from a racial or ethnic minority and only 18% by a man from a minority segment.

Primary barriers to the lack of advancement of underrepresented talent

- 1 Unclear career paths and steps to advancement
- 2 Too little exposure to senior leaders
- 3 Lack of mentors or career support

Future of Work

A top priority for 42% of HR leaders

Common challenge

49% of HR leaders say they do not have an explicit future of work strategy.

Postpandemic disruption upends workforce planning

The COVID-19 pandemic will have a lasting impact on the future of work. The question for HR leaders is how much these trends have and will alter their organization's strategic goals and plans and what immediate and longer-term workforce adjustments are required as a result.

9 Future of Work Trends Post-COVID-19

What are the long-term implications of the coronavirus pandemic on the HR function and work?

Accelerated trends

- More employees working remotely
- Increased use of employee data
- Greater role of the employer as a social safety net
- Wider use of contingent workers

New impacts

- Critical skills are no longer synonymous with roles
- Some employees find work more humanizing in the crisis; others find it dehumanizing
- Crisis response distinguishes top-tier employee brands

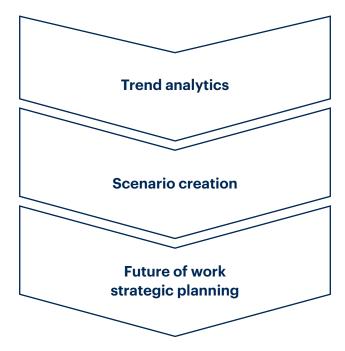

Pendulum swings

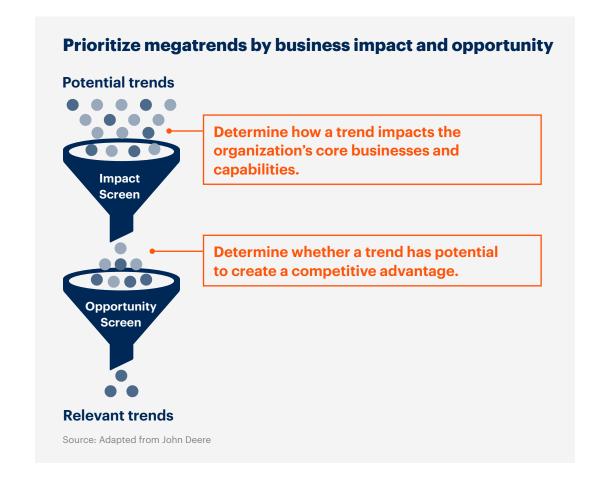

- Organizations prioritize resilience as much as efficiency
- Crisis adds to organizational complexity, straining design, culture and value proposition

Identify the future of work trends most relevant to your business

Screening megatrends for relevance, impact and opportunity is a critical first step in HR scenario planning and strategic workforce planning.

Executive leaders can craft a future of work strategy using the following process

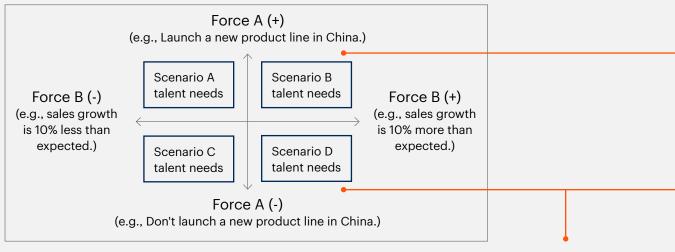

Scenario plans assess evolving talent needs

Analyze the impact of multiple potential scenarios to identify and prepare for technological, social and labor changes that could significantly shift talent needs.

Scenario matrix exercise

Step 1: Partner with business leaders to identify business/ environmental forces that could significantly change the talent required to execute strategy (i.e., talent criticality, importance, location).

Step 2: Select two forces and plot them on a matrix to create different scenarios. Work with the business to predict how the talent needed to execute business strategy would shift in each of those scenarios.

	Scenario A			Scenario B			Scenario C
	Criticality	Quantity required	Location	Criticality	Quantity required	Location	Criticality	Quantity required	Location
Capability A	High	Same	Same	Medium	Same	Different	High	More	Different
Capability B	Medium	More	Same	High	More	Different	Low	Less	Same
Capability C	Low	Less	Different	Low	Less	Same	High	Same	Different

Adopt a consequential accountability DEI strategy

Many organizations currently focus their DEI approach on collective accountability, but that doesn't produce real results on DEI outcomes. HR should hold leaders accountable, using a DEI approach that leads to consequential accountability.
